

Arts, Culture, and Recreation

The availability of arts, culture, and recreational opportunities are often qualities future homeowners look for when examining cities to locate to. Having and investing into arts, culture, and a recreational systems has many long-term benefits.

Indicator Score = Red/Worse

TREND ANALYSIS:

Reductions in revenues has placed pressure on the City's ability to invest in its arts, culture, and recreational systems. Over the last several years, the City has been able to get a little back on track in recognizing its commitment to arts, culture and recreation. In 2015, the City saw a decrease in spending for arts, culture, and recreation due mainly to the investment in capital improvements.

